

THE EVENING CRITIC.

ESTABLISHED AUGUST 1868.
SUMMER THEATRE COMIQUE-Variety.

Special Feature Bulletin.

The special bulletin issued from the Signal Office to-day says:
The indications are that fair weather will prevail in New England and the Middle Atlantic States to-day and probably to-morrow, with no decided change in temperature.

The Critic in Georgetown.

Copies of THE EVENING CRITIC may be had, and subscriptions left at E. K. Lundy's book and stationery store, 128 Bridge street, Georgetown.

PERTINENT PARAGRAPHS

About People and Things in Washington.
STREET LAMPS will be lighted at 6:30 p. m. and extinguished at 4 a. m.

THE DASHAWAYS had an enthusiastic meeting at Lincoln Hall last night.

ONLY eighteen arrests were made yesterday and last night by the police.

THE new church of the Reformation, Capitol Hill, will be occupied October 16.

A MEETING of the Local Yorktown Centennial Committee will be held to-night at the National Hotel.

THE Women's Christian Temperance Association conducted gospel temperance services at Masonic Temple yesterday.

NELLIE YOUNG, for threatening to kill Carrie Webster with a bed-slat, was today put under bonds to keep the peace.

AUGUSTUS MAXON was this morning charged with stealing two loads of bricks from Wm. S. Ryder, and was fined $5 therefor.

THE description published in THE CRITIC of a watch stolen on Friday at the Capitol was the means of having it returned to its owner.

THE Methodist Society Tabernacle will be ready in November, and a new German church, on Fifteenth and P streets, will be built by Christians.

THE HOUSE of Mrs. Farham, No. 1103 M street northwest, was robbed on Friday night of nearly one thousand dollars' worth of silverware and clothing.

A SLIGHT FIRE occurred on Saturday night at 915 F street, caused by the black crane in the window catching fire. The damage was very trifling.

COLMAN HANCOCK (colored) was up before Judge Smith to-day charged with assaulting Catharine Corbin over the head, last night, on Ninth street. Fined $5.

HENRY EDMONSON was to-day arraigned for an assault on James K. Hodgkins in the Corcoran building, but it appeared to be a fight, and the charge was dismissed.

GEO. WASHINGTON and Wm. O'Brien, were to-day charged with malicious trespass on the property of John Lee, and were put under bonds to keep away from there.

CARL WEINBERG, of this city, was overpowered by the heat in Baltimore yesterday, at the corner of Monument and Durham streets, but recovered under proper treatment.

THE CITY HALL was closed to-day, with the exception of Mr. Meigs' office, which was open a short time to give the lawyers an opportunity of examining papers of pressing importance.

MAMIE BELL, a colored woman of 1109 Third street northwest, who is partially insane, was separated from her friends in the crowd on Friday afternoon, and has not been seen since. The friends and detectives are making every effort to find her.

PATRICK McFARREY was to-day charged in the Police Court with failing to keep a light at night on building material deposited by him on the corner of Twenty-fourth and M streets. His personal bonds were taken to remedy the matter.

THOMAS CONWAY, of this city, declined to dignify the alley running from Four-and-a-half street, south of the Avenue, with the name of Park street. The naming of private courtyards "streets" tends to complicate the plain system of letters and numbers.

JOSEPH HARKNUT, of 712 Second street northwest, was yesterday charged with this morning and identified as his property about $30 worth of watches, etc., which were found tied up in a cloth on Massachusetts avenue about two weeks ago.

Bismarck's First Love.

For some months, says a foreign letter, there resided in the family of a neighboring land proprietor (in the Toronto Comitat) a lady, past the age of 50, who in her youth was Bismarck's first love. She was born at Griefswald, where her parents let rooms to young students attending the university in that town. About the year 1810 a certain Count St., who later on made a brilliant military career, lived at their house, and frequently received the visits of a fellow-student from the Agricultural Academy. This was Otto von Bismarck, who soon conceived a tender affection for the 19-year-old Josephine, the daughter of the house, and manifested his sentiments in several touching epistles to the sweetheart left behind. In one of these missives he formally sued for Josephine's hand, which, however, was promptly refused him by the parents, who strongly objected to give their daughter to "an upstart young man." Thereupon in 1812 the correspondence ceased altogether, Josephine's parents, who had met with sad financial reverses through the insolvency of their own speculator, had emigrated to America (Minnesota) in 1818, and afterward went to Brooklyn to live, where in 1832, after much reluctance on her part, Josephine became the wife of a Hungarian emigrant and his pet name, J. H. Bismarck, who, as you know, was the father of the great statesman.

The President.

The President passed a very quiet Sunday, and received only a few visitors. He attended the morning service at St. John's P. E. Church, of which his late wife was a communicant when he married her. The President will probably be a regular attendant to the services at this church. He never visits to go to New York, but he will attend to some private business. He will probably go this week in order to avoid being there the week after, when the Republican State Convention will be held.

Bombarding a House.

Ellen Sullivan was up before Judge Snell to-day charged with throwing stones into the house of Henry Switzer, on Seventh street, near Broadway, last night. The court did not believe the statement of Ellen that she was not guilty, as the evidence on the other side preponderated, and she was fined $5 or seven days.

The Gravedigger's Insurance Business.

This has already done much to disgrace Pennsylvania, is still spreading with rapidity, and in Pittsburg, Cambria and Scranton is said to be fairly booming. It is complained that the doctors, who are satisfied with their fees for certificates, are securing many of the best "subjects" for themselves, thus leaving the professional speculator out in the cold. It is even reported that some of the doctors are falling to the temptation that sick persons are afraid to employ them lest they should be drugged to death, and that, in consequence, the death-rate in the Lackawanna valley has increased rapidly of late.

Mrs. Booth, the widow of the great tragedian, lives in a cottage at Long Branch with her son Mr. Joseph Booth. Notwithstanding her four score years she is extremely bright and clear, converses freely on past and present topics, and takes a keen interest in making inquiries as to people and things in Hartford county, Maryland, where she so long resided.

Lord Beaconsfield was capable of polishing an epigram, or a sentence, sometimes a whole paragraph. But you never read long without finding him slowly, and a formal document the Queen's speech was too much for him. His mind was neither clear nor orderly; and he was too lazy to take continuous pains. Yet it used to be said nothing stung him more than the criticisms on his style.

An English gentleman has had constructed for his personal enjoyment a novel boat, twelve feet by six in size, and divided into two compartments, one of which is a "land yacht." The owner's sleeping-room is fitted exactly like a yachtman's cabin, leaving the fore part as a saloon, in which accommodation is also provided for a servant. The "land yacht" is so devised that it can travel either by road or rail, and the owner will make his first "cruise" along the Italian coast.

A little girl of three years, who had been attacked and was about to be killed by a so-called tame deer, in San Antonio, Tex., was rescued by her brother, only two years older than herself. The plucky little fellow seized the angry beast by the horns and, in spite of vigorous pitching and tossing, held on with great spirit and determination until his mother and a servant interfered and reduced the animal to subjection.

AMUSEMENTS.

National Theatre.

To-morrow night the National Theatre opens with Mr. and Mrs. George S. Knight in their new and great play in four acts and five tableaux, "Baron Rudolph." This is the first play in which Mr. Knight, who is really a first-class actor, is playing his part as an actor. He is finely supported, and the piece is put upon the stage handsomely.

Ford's Opera-house.

"Patience," the gem opera of the day, opens to-night on Tuesday night. It is a beautiful comic opera from the gifted pen and mind of Gilbert and Sullivan, the authors of "Pinafore" and "The Pirates of Penzance." The metropolitan press went wild over it in New York, and it is pronounced by the general verdict of theatre-goers as the hit of the season. It is handsomely presented by a most capable corps of artists.

The Theatre Comique.

This place of amusement opens its fall and winter season with a splendid variety show. Among the kaleidoscopic attractions are Langdon and Allison's "Swift and Sure" combination, Minnie Oscar Grey, W. T. Stephens and the remarkable dramatic duo, Romeo, Zip and Hero, the Barker Brothers, K. Montrose, the Maxwell and a host of others. Matinees Tuesday and Friday.

Abner's Garden.

There will be no concert at Abner's summer garden to-night on account of the national sorrow on the occasion of President Garfield's death.

Driver's Garden.

Driver's garden is closed this evening in consequence of the national sorrow. The garden is a place of amusement, and opens to-morrow with its best of attractions, vocal and instrumental music, the Marine Band, Messrs. Maas and Drew, the famous character singers, and Mr. George W. French, the eminent baritone.

Services in the Churches Yesterday.

There was a large congregation at the church in the District yesterday and many new faces in the pulpits. Rev. Dr. Russell, of Missouri, preached at the Christian Church. Rev. Mr. Butler preached on the death of President Garfield, and took occasion to say that the death of the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in his coffin. There was a solitary power in other agencies besides physicians' ministrations. The atmosphere caused by the presence of a minister of religion was a helpful one. He said that though the President's death was a great loss to the country, it was a relief to the confidence had in medical and surgical science had been considerably shaken. Rev. F. Noble, a colleague of the late President, preached at the Methodist Episcopal Church. The congregation was large, and the President's friends by excluding his pastor from the sick-room. Mr. Power, he said, had never been admitted to the President's room during his illness, and never saw him from the time he was shot till he saw him in